

Department of Natural Resources Seminars

Fall 2009

TUESDAY - 3:30-4:30 PM - 304 FERNOW HALL

Sept. 1	"When can efforts to control nuisance and invasive species backfire?" Cliff Kraft - Natural Resources (Cornell)
Sept. 8	"Nutrition and food webs: diet determination, food quantity, food quality, and phylogenetic constraints" Kim Schulz - Department of Environmental & Forest Biology (ESF)
Sept. 15	"The development of co-management in theory and practice" Ryan Plummer - Tourism & Environment (Brock University)
Sept. 22	"Migratory fishes as functional linkages across tropical riverscapes" Alex Flecker - Ecology & Evolutionary Biology (Cornell)
Sept. 29	"National security and land use planning: (dis)connecting the dots" Chuck Geisler - Developmental Sociology (Cornell)
Oct. 6	"Biofuels: are they environmentally sustainable?" Bob Howarth - Ecology & Evolutionary Biology (Cornell)
Oct. 13	"Adaptive management of overabundant species" Evan Cooch - Natural Resources (Cornell)
Oct. 20	"Modeling coral disease: within-host dynamics, individual demography, and population persistence." Steve Ellner - Ecology & Evolutionary Biology (Cornell)
Oct. 27	"A dynamic systems approach for integrating ecological and human dimensions in fish and wildlife management" Jody Enck - Natural Resources (Cornell)
Nov. 3	"Plots, Pixels, and Parcels: Trends in conceptual approaches, sampling strategies, and sustainability informatics from the Baltimore Ecosystem Study" J. Morgan Grove - United States Forest Service
Nov. 10	"Measuring the GHG emissions effects of increased US biofuels production" Antonio Bento - Applied Economics & Management (Cornell)
Nov. 17	"Human dominated ecosystems: Do natural processes still matter?" Steve Raciti - Natural Resources (Cornell)
Dec. 1	"Ecosystem-based management in action: linking science to local planning for biodiversity conservation (in the Hudson River valley)" Leslie Zucker, Karen Strong, and Laura Heady - Natural Resources (Cornell)
Dec. 8	DNR Undergraduate research seminars Lars Rudstam and P. Smallidge - Natural Resources (Cornell)