

2005 Award Program

DEADLINE FOR SUBMITTING: September 26, 2005

Nominations are being sought for three awards to recognize Cornell Cooperative Extension professionals who have contributed to natural resource / environmental issues programming. The NY-ANREP Awards Program encourages higher standards among Extension staff and expands awareness of excellent programs. The program honors outstanding members, partners, and Extension staff as well as the educational materials and programs they have developed. Awards in 2005 will recognize outstanding Extension natural resources and environmental educational materials developed or enhanced since January 2005. Awards will be presented at the CALS In-service, November 2005.

Program Excellence Award – This award is for Cornell Cooperative Extension personnel who have created or improved an educational program that exemplifies positive impacts on the environment. The program can be based on publications, workshops, Internet resources, or other teaching approaches. The award criteria are:

- Extent to which an environmental challenge has been addressed by the Extension education program.
- Importance of the environmental condition either regionally or statewide.
- Amount and quality of outreach and spin-off effects of the program.
- Extent to which the program is replicable in other counties or regions.

David Allee Campus/County Connection Award – This award is for Cornell Cooperative Extension personnel that have fostered exceptional relationships to bridge campus resources and local environmental needs. It supports the spirit of the 2002 Land Grant Mission Review in which . . . “county associations regularly identify the needs of their communities and work with university faculty and others to address those needs and help their communities problem solve through educational programming that puts experience and research knowledge to work.” It celebrates the work of David J. Allee, late professor of resource economics in the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences and leader of the Cornell Local Government Program.

The award criteria include:

- Extent to which an identified community environmental need is addressed through collaboration and research on campus.
- Level of mutual benefit and recognition for the community and campus, leveraged through the Cooperative Extension System.
- Durability of the program to continue to meet ongoing needs of the community.

Innovative Outreach Award – This award is for Cornell Cooperative Extension personnel who have demonstrated unique and innovative approaches to natural resource / environmental program responsibilities. It rewards the ability to connect with new audiences, or existing audiences in new and effective ways. Criteria for this award include:

- Consideration for the special needs of a particular audience in understanding and acting on an environmental issue.
- Extent to which the outreach transforms perceptions of Extension education, whether for a new or existing audience.
- Quality of educational outreach in accomplishing the original objectives.
- Replicability to other new audiences or through other environment / natural resources programs.
